College Portrait トップページ

The screenshot shows the homepage of the College Portrait website. At the top, there's a navigation bar with links for Home, Compare, At A Glance, Contact, About, and Resources. The Home link is highlighted with an orange background. To the right of the navigation are links for "Skip To Content" and "Accessibility".

The main header features the text "The College Portrait" and "Your best education picture." Below this, a paragraph explains the purpose of the site: "There's a lot to learn about colleges and universities, whether you're looking for a school to attend or for information on how well your local institution is performing. The first step is getting reliable information about what matters most to you. The College Portrait is a source of basic, comparable information designed for anyone to learn more about public 4-year colleges and universities." To the right of this text are four colored boxes representing different user groups: "STUDENTS" (orange), "FAMILIES" (green), "ADVISORS" (red), and "POLICY MAKERS" (purple).

A "Get Started" section contains a callout box with the text: "Click the picture on the right that best matches your reason for visiting to get started! We'll help you find the information you need for the colleges and universities you're interested in." Another callout box below it says: "Like higher education, the VSA has changed a lot since 2008; click here to learn about what's next with our new Vision!"

At the bottom left, there's a "Quick Find" search bar where users can enter a school name, address, or distance. It includes a "Find Your School" button and an "Advanced Search" link. To the right, there's a section titled "About the College Portrait" which provides information about the VSA and the website's mission. It also highlights that the site is a trustworthy source of information for over 260 public colleges and universities.

On the far left, there's a map of the United States with state abbreviations, and a callout box explaining how users can find a university by state or use the map to see College Portraits for that state.

On the right side, there's a list of various pieces of information available on the site, such as student and faculty characteristics, admissions requirements, campus safety, future plans of graduates, average class sizes, exchange rates, cost of attendance, financial aid info, personalized net price calculator, routing numbers, library directories, and European libraries. A final callout box at the bottom right states: "And only on a College Portrait can users find a snapshot of student experiences on campus and campus-wide student learning outcomes."

Overview

Numerous publishers collect information each year for their college guide and ranking publications through lengthy campus questionnaires. To reduce the amount of time and effort required to respond to duplicate questions on multiple surveys, publishers and the education community collaborated to produce a standard format (the Common Data Set) to capture most of the requested data. The publishers heading this effort are The College Board, Thomson-Peterson's, and U.S. News and World Report.

The Common Data Set is organized around the following topics:

1. general campus
2. enrollment and persistence
3. first-time, first-year (freshmen) admissions
4. transfer admissions
5. academic offerings and policies
6. student life
7. annual expenses
8. financial aid
9. instructional faculty and class size
10. degrees conferred
11. definitions

To view a UC Berkeley Common Data Set report, select a year from the list below.

The data will open in Microsoft Excel (Excel Viewer is available from the Microsoft website). Each section is on an individual sheet within the workbook (see the tabs at the bottom of the sheet).

UC Berkeley's data is the result of a collaborative effort by the Office of Planning and Analysis, Office of Undergraduate Admissions, and the Financial Aid and Scholarships Office.
